Chapter 481: The Creation of the Elemental Angels

Sung Jin-Woo sat upon his colossal throne within the Godverse, his radiant form compressed to a mountain-sized state. His golden eyes shimmered as he observed the endless expanse of his dominion, contemplating his next creation.

The Eternal Battlefields' Realms were now filled with ceaseless war. The former monarchs clashed endlessly against the Rulers, and with Antares’s arrival, the conflict had reached new heights of intensity. Yet despite the chaos, Sung Jin-Woo remained unfazed. He had long since ascended beyond mere battles and rivalries.

Now, his mind turned toward a new purpose—expanding his divine legions. The Apostles of God, the Dark Apostles, the Heavenly Soldiers, the Shadowkins, and the countless materialized shadow soldiers already numbered beyond comprehension. But even with their vast numbers, something was missing.

He desired beings of pure elemental divinity—angels forged not from light or darkness, but from the very essence of creation itself. And so, Sung Jin-Woo willed it into existence.

The Birth of the Elemental Angels

From the depths of the Godverse, a divine forge emerged, an ethereal construct as large as entire universes. The forge pulsed with celestial energy, drawing upon the primordial elements that formed reality itself. Sung Jin-Woo stretched out his hand, and from his palm, streams of energy poured into the forge, shaping the first of his new creations.

1. Mithril Angels – The first race to emerge, their bodies were forged from the sacred silver-blue metal, gleaming with divine brilliance. Their wings radiated a soft glow, and their presence exuded an aura of protection and resilience.

2. Orichalcum Angels – These angels bore an orange-gold metallic sheen, their armor imbued with the ability to amplify divine energy. They were the strongest defenders, capable of erecting impenetrable barriers of pure orichalcum.

3. Adamantium Angels – Heavier than all others, these angels were indestructible, their forms composed of unbreakable adamantium. Their wings, though slightly darker than their brethren, pulsed with sheer might, making them the vanguard of any celestial war.

4. Platinum Angels – Elegant and refined, these angels shone with a mirror-like sheen, reflecting all forms of magic and energy directed at them. Their divine resonance made them ideal commanders, ensuring absolute order among the ranks.

5. Gold Angels – Shining like miniature suns, the Gold Angels carried a warm radiance that healed allies and smote enemies with divine fire. Their very presence inspired devotion and awe.

6. Silver Angels – Agile and swift, these angels acted as messengers and scouts, their sleek silver bodies allowing them to move at incomprehensible speeds. They wielded lances of pure silverlight, piercing through darkness with ease.

7. Bronze Angels – The warriors of endurance, their bronze-colored bodies were resistant to decay and corruption. No darkness could stain them, and their willpower was unbreakable.

8. Ruby Angels – Born of fire, these angels blazed with crimson radiance, their wings trailing embers as they soared through the heavens. They wielded swords of pure flame, incinerating foes in divine fury.

9. Jade Angels – Serene and wise, these angels were attuned to nature, their emerald-green bodies glowing with restorative power. They were the healers of the celestial hosts, capable of rejuvenating entire armies with a single touch.

10. Crystal Angels – Transparent and prismatic, these angels refracted light into infinite colors, dazzling enemies and empowering allies. Their presence created harmony in any battlefield.

11. Diamond Angels – The hardest of all, their bodies were made of pure diamond, nearly indestructible. Their wings gleamed like cut gemstones, and their strikes shattered reality itself.

12. Pearl Angels – Soft in appearance but vast in wisdom, these angels radiated an aura of calm, their presence soothing even the most chaotic minds. They were the divine counselors, ensuring balance among the celestial ranks.

13. Gemstone Angels – A mixture of various rare minerals, these angels embodied versatility, able to shift between offensive and defensive roles with ease. Their adaptability made them formidable in any battle.

14. Emerald Angels – Vibrant and pulsating with the energy of life, these angels were second only to the Jade Angels in their healing capabilities. Their presence encouraged growth and rebirth.

15. Sapphire Angels – Deep blue and radiant, these angels wielded the power of water and ice, controlling tides and storms. Their strikes carried the force of crashing waves, drowning evil in celestial floods.

16. Garnet Angels – With bodies infused with the energy of the earth, these angels acted as the foundation of the celestial armies. Their stability and strength made them the most unshakable warriors.

17. Amethyst Angels – The most enigmatic of all, their purple crystalline forms shimmered with arcane energy. They wielded spells that bent reality, making them both unpredictable and dangerously powerful.

Once created, these elemental angels stood before Sung Jin-Woo, their numbers beyond count, stretching across the endless horizon of the Godverse. Each bore a single-horned helmet, a mark of their divine origin, and carried two to four wings, signifying their rank among the celestial legions.

Sung Jin-Woo gazed upon his new creations, nodding in approval.

"You shall be the Eternal Sentinels," he declared, his voice resonating across the realms. "Guardians of my dominion, watchers of the multiverse. You will ensure balance, smite corruption, and bring my will wherever it is needed."

The angels knelt in unison, their voices harmonizing into a celestial hymn that shook the very fabric of existence.

"As you command, our lord," they intoned.

And so, the Elemental Angels became part of Sung Jin-Woo’s divine order, spreading across the realms to carry out his will. Some took their place among the armies of the Godverse, while others ventured into the endless expanse of the multiverse, ensuring that the dominion of Sung Jin-Woo remained absolute.
